

Families and Divorce: Working It Out

This four-hour educational program helps families through a sometimes difficult transition. Learning how to work out problems in the best interest of the children is the primary goal of the program. Working It Out is a practical approach to solving problems before they become overwhelming. Topics include:

- Families and the divorcing process
- Effects of divorce on children and family relationships
- Facing a change
- Practical tips for parenting through divorce
- Visits and parenting schedules from a child's viewpoint
- Taking care of your needs and your child's needs
- Getting help through community resources

The class is facilitated by Regional Health Systems' professionals experienced with transitioning families. Participants receive a handbook to reference material learned.

Registration

- Advanced registration is required.
- Because class size is limited, pre-registration by phone is required to assure your place.
